The Institute of Historical Studies, in its commitment to scientific research and knowledge transfer, has created the CEU Chair for History, Memory and Identity in response to the European Parliament resolution of 19 September 2019 on the importance of European historical memory for the future of Europe. It will be the European Parliament itself that will condemn totalitarian movements and make 23 September the remembrance day for the victims of Communism and Nazism.

The CEU Chair for History, Memory and Identity is integrated into the work of disseminating the values of our culture against the development of totalitarian ideologies among younger generations, through seminars, training courses, research projects and complementary training programmes. This work is already being carried out in other research institutes and museums in Europe and other parts of the world, especially in America. Internationalisation with these institutions is necessary to collaborate together in the prevention of the totalitarian danger, as well as to facilitate the forging of a free, strong society.

The CEU Chair for History, Memory and Identity invites institutions from all over the world to join the project, launching initiatives that help us to transmit historical truth, love of freedom and defence of the roots of our identity.
